Your Thoughts

I was happy to read Walking the Talk by Aileen Goos Berard in your spring edition. It is so refreshing to know that someone of Fresh I.E.'s stature uses his celebrity for such good causes. I enjoyed his candour about a past riddled with bad choices and how he's turned that into a way to help kids stay clear of trouble. The world needs more people like him - someone who's hip enough to make an impression on youth, yet wise enough to parlay his experiences into a positive message.

Thanks for covering such great places for dining in the city! We recently dined at Segovia Tapas Bar (soon after reading the coverage in Style's spring issue). Both the food and service were fantastic. It's so good to discover these beautiful little places, which is more difficult to do when there's no way to find out about them. My husband and I look forward to your next issue.

The recipes featured in Style Manitoba are delightful. I was very pleased with the last issue, which also included the booklet with extra recipes. I am a cooking show addict and usually make most of the recipes you feature in the magazine. (My husband loves my joy for cooking!) Thanks for the coverage!

I have looked at many suites for seniors over the past few months and particularly appreciated the coverage Style Manitoba has given to buildings intended for older people. With the photos and information provided in previous issues, it was easier to find a new home for my father this past month. Without the coverage, my task would have been more difficult. Thanks for your help!
